

You Could Get Up to $200 If You Bought Gas in Oregon at an ARCO or ARCO ampm Station and Paid a Debit Card Fee

What is this notice about?

An Oregon jury found that BP West Coast Products LLC (“BPWCP”) charged more for gas than the amount registered at the pump and failed to properly disclose its prices when it charged a 35-cent fee to consumers who used debit cards to pay for gas at Oregon ARCO stations. BPWCP has denied the claims in this case and plans to appeal the jury verdict. In the meantime, eligible consumers who have not received a direct notice in the mail may file claims.

Am I eligible to file a claim?

If you purchased gas at Oregon ARCO or ARCO ampm locations between January 1, 2011 and August 30, 2013 and paid a 35-cent debit card transaction fee, you could get up to $200, minus applicable attorneys’ fees and expenses, if you file a claim.

How can I file a claim?

File a claim online or by mail by December 31, 2014. If you file a valid claim, you will be eligible to receive up to $200, and you will give up your right to individually sue BPWCP for the claims in this case.

What are my other rights?

You may also:

- Choose not to file a claim and retain your right to individually sue BPWCP;
- Comment on or object to the handling of your claim, the claims and notice process used in this case, or the request for attorneys’ fees and expenses by the attorneys representing you as a Class Member. The attorneys may request up to $40 (or up to 20%) in attorneys’ fees from each claim and reimbursement of no more than $345,714.15 in total costs from all claims. They also intend to ask the Court to require BPWCP to pay all or some of the fees and costs. A copy of the fee petition will be at www.DebitCardClassAction.com. The earliest deadline for comments and objections is January 14, 2015. Other deadlines may apply.
- The Court will hear objections and comments at a hearing scheduled for February 11, 2015.
